WELCOME TO MACFARLANES

Join Macfarlanes and from day one you will be far more than just another potential lawyer: like every graduate joining us, we want you to make it as one of the next generation of partners.

We ask one fundamental question of every graduate we recruit: do you have what it takes to be an exceptional lawyer?

We invest a great deal in the recruitment process: it is our partners who review your applications and, on assessment days, it is our partners who will interview you.

As a trainee you will be expected to contribute right from the start. You will be tested in challenging situations working with some of the world's most successful and ambitious businesses and individuals.

Our size means you'll be closer to the frontline, making a valuable – and valued – contribution. Our trainees are of the highest quality and we are confident that they can be trusted with the highest quality work.

It is demanding. You will need a high level of intellectual ability but also the character and drive to succeed. The hours can be long and the work is hard, but we will support you.

The majority of our partners trained here. In my own case, I trained at a Magic Circle firm. When I joined Macfarlanes as a junior lawyer, I was struck by the responsibility that the trainees here are given, and by their quality. The formal training provided during the training contract is second to none. Trainees have responsibility for their own work, leading to a high level of personal pride in what is produced. Having shared an office with trainees over the last 20 years, I see that this ethos has not changed. That same trust and confidence we have in our trainees, alongside their qualities and the commitment they bring, make them the exceptional lawyers we have here today.

ABOUT US

We are a distinctive law firm with a truly international practice.

The driving force behind the firm is an absolute commitment to delivering the right advice in the right way to our clients.

We know that clients face mounting complexity and time pressure, and our lawyers use their experience to deliver clear, concise advice.

The firm's partners get involved, stay involved, and with the support of tight knit teams, advise on the most critical matters with clarity and confidence.

The size of our firm is important. We've kept things simple. We've decided against growth at the expense of quality, against size at the expense of efficiency and agility. So whilst we're large enough to advise on the most complex matters, we're also small enough to ensure that our people and our work are exceptional, without fail.

Rather than opening multiple offices around the world, we take a "client first" approach to international work. Our clients get the best advice from the right lawyer – wherever in the world they need it.

Our combination of culture and expertise makes us a formidable force in the legal market. We sustain our position by recruiting and training successive generations of truly exceptional lawyers.

You could be one of them.

WE ARE A LAW FIRM.
WITH A DISTINCTIVE APPROACH.

WHAT WE OFFER

We treat one another with fairness and civility – it's how we get the best from people. From day one, you'll be exposed to real work, and you'll make a real contribution.

We expect a lot from our people. But we also nurture them. A senior lawyer will keep a close eye on your performance and ensure you receive the support you need. The training programme here is like no other. It represents the enduring commitment to training and development that is woven through our firm.

IT STARTS WITH SELECTING RARE INDIVIDUALS

Only the right people can do what we ask of them, so we look for a rare combination of character, drive and intellectual curiosity.

DEALING DIRECTLY WITH CLIENTS

The close support of a partner will enable you to deal directly with clients, assisting on complex transactions, from the first day of your training contract.

A BROAD LEARNING EXPERIENCE

We handle the full range of matters, from corporate, real estate and litigation to private client, and our work is often international. For example, over 70 per cent of our corporate work is multi-jurisdictional. That means wider exposure for you and a closer look at the issues facing our clients.

THE SUPPORT YOU NEED TO THRIVE

We give you all the support you would expect and close mentoring from partners and regular reviews.

OUR COLLEGIATE CULTURE

Our culture is a prized asset defined by openness, fairness and independence of spirit. We treat everyone at the firm with respect. But we do not take ourselves too seriously – the atmosphere here is friendly and the social side of life at Macfarlanes is valued.

JAMES EUSTACE

EDUCATION: HISTORY, YORK

JOINED: AS A TRAINEE IN 2012

ROLE: SOLICITOR

As a trainee in M&A, James was part of the team advising Verizon Communications Inc. on its acquisition of Vodafone's 45 per cent interest in Verizon Wireless for $130bn, the third largest M&A deal in history.

We won the brief because of our long-term relationship with a leading US law firm, and our reputation for delivering high-quality, complex international work. The client understood that both the UK and US elements of the deal were equally important, so they needed law firms who were at the top of their game in this area for both jurisdictions. We've worked with Wachtell over a number of years, they know us well and recommended to Verizon that they appoint us as their UK counsel.

IT WAS GREAT TO BE INVOLVED IN WORK THAT WAS COVERED SO EXTENSIVELY IN THE PRESS AND TO KNOW THAT IT WAS HAVING A TANGIBLE EFFECT ON THE UK ECONOMY.

James Eustace
Solicitor, Tax

I was part of the corporate and M&A team on the deal. The team was very small (I was the only trainee who worked on it on a permanent basis) so I was very involved with the matter from start to finish. I assisted with the preparation of the prospectus, carried out research tasks and helped to liaise with the UKLA. There were also a large number of slightly less run-of-the-mill tasks that regularly arose: from researching the history of Verizon, to co-ordinating the billing for the many foreign jurisdictions we worked with.

We worked very closely with lawyers in the US over a period of many months so that we effectively operated as one team from the client's perspective. Efficient communication was essential. We regularly delivered joint advice (both written and oral) to Verizon in addition to the advice that we separately delivered on specific UK aspects of the transaction.

It was great to be involved in work that was covered so extensively in the press and to know that it was having a tangible effect on the UK economy.

MERIT

Above all, what matters to us is your ability and drive to become an outstanding lawyer. If you're ambitious and have the determination to succeed, we will notice. We'll give you the support and exposure you need and the opportunities to grow and progress your career with us.

WHAT WE EXPECT

Our reputation is based on the exceptional quality of our lawyers.

Each year we recruit up to 30 graduates. Our aim is to train them and keep them: the offer of a training contract at Macfarlanes is an offer to build your whole career with us.

We are looking for exceptional lawyers. Our people are our biggest asset and vital to our continued success. We are proud of our commitment to creating and retaining generations of lawyers of the absolute highest technical ability, who are focused and decisive, yet, at the same time, are committed to a deep understanding of each individual client's needs.

Trainees here thrive on responsibility and challenge and are ready to begin their careers right away – dealing with clients, managing client matters and representing the firm from their first day here.

The qualities we look for in our lawyers include strong interpersonal skills, an ambitious, commercial approach, drive, motivation and resilience. Above all, we value a commitment to excellence, and an intuitive understanding of people. Our clients come from a range of backgrounds and cultures and our people do too. We welcome applications from candidates with either a law or non-law background with outstanding academics, including a 2:1 degree or above.

I converted into law from a ten year career in mechanical engineering, working on large industrial and mining projects across Africa. I had an unforgettable experience in the most remote areas of Africa, however law provides me with an opportunity to harness the skills I gained in a broad range of sectors.

An engineer's skills are well suited to law – the ability to analyse and understand complex issues and provide clear, concise and accurate feedback matters to engineers and lawyers.

I wanted a firm which would value individuals based on their skills and abilities, and where trainees are important assets, supported by a strong training contract. A small trainee intake, and the quality of its work and trainee scheme, meant Macfarlanes stood out.

The trainee scheme here maximises individual strengths by instilling trust and responsibility from an early stage. My training seats included derivatives and trading, litigation and corporate and M&A, areas which were unconnected to my previous career, so the experience was a steep learning curve, challenging but hugely rewarding too.

I qualified into corporate and M&A in March 2016, and the skills I have gained in both my previous career and my training contract have quickly been put to good use. I am on secondment with one of our global industrial and commodity trading clients dealing with a diverse range of industrial and commodity matters. I feel that I am able to offer unique added value to the client given my past experience as well as continuing my career development.

From trainees to partners, the quality of the people who work at Macfarlanes is extraordinary. This is a firm that prides itself on exceptional service and exceptional results, and that depends on the people who work here: trainees are expected to deliver a certain level of quality from the first day, and due to the support of supervisors, and the firm's ethos as a whole, this is achieved without exception.

INCLUSION AND CSR

Louise Zekaria joined us in 2017 as Head of Inclusion & Corporate Social Responsibility. This is a key appointment for the firm reflecting our commitment to developing these areas.

GRADUATE RECRUITMENT INITIATIVES

As part of our commitment to diversity and to enable us to widen the pool of talent we access our future trainees from we have partnered with a number of programmes. These include:

Aspiring Solicitors

We have recently partnered with Aspiring Solicitors to enable us to reach students from a variety of backgrounds across a wide spread of universities. Aspiring Solicitors aims to increase diversity in the legal profession and educates and informs the next generation about the importance of diversity in our sector.

MyPlus Students' Club

We work with MyPlus Students' Club in our bid to do more to attract, recruit and develop talented people who have a disability. MyPlus Students' Club provides useful and practical advice for students and graduates with a disability or long-term health condition.

Pathways to Law

Our relationship with Pathways to Law allows us to offer work experience to students from under-represented backgrounds. Pathways to Law is an innovative widening participation initiative to provide opportunities for students from state schools in England who are interested in a career in law and will be first generation attendees at university.

PRIME

We are signatories to PRIME commitment, a commitment by the legal profession to provide fair access to high quality work experience to students from less privileged backgrounds. As a PRIME member we are actively trying to ensure that anyone who wants to enter the world of law has an equal chance to do so, regardless of their background.

Rare Recruitment

We have worked with Rare Recruitment for several years as part of our ongoing commitment to diversity. Rare provide access, training and mentoring for outstanding students from black and other ethnic minority communities and their mission is to help the best employers in the world build workforces that reflect society's diversity.

INCLUSIVE RECRUITMENT

We have adapted our recruitment processes to ensure that we recruit the best candidates regardless of background. We were one of the first law firms where the vast majority of our assessment processes are scored CV blind. This means that part of a candidate's assessment is based on their performance on the day, which we believe promotes greater fairness. Macfarlanes was also one of the first signatories to Rare Recruitment's Contextual Recruitment System, which enables us to understand the context of a candidate's experiences and qualifications.

FIRM-WIDE INITIATIVES

Further to our inclusive recruitment practices, we have a number of firm-wide initiatives currently underway:

Supporting education

For more than ten years the firm has supported a number of secondary schools in Newham, East London. We provide one-to-one mentoring to 14 and 15 year olds, as well running specific skills-based workshops.

Access to justice

From Autumn 2017, the firm will provide legal advice to users of a Shoreditch food co-operative. The food co-op is an anti-food poverty initiative which provides affordable and locally sourced food to people on low incomes and is a lifeline for housebound older people using the centre.

Macfarlanes' Community Day

Since launching in May 2017, many team members have been using their one day allowance to volunteer for a charity or community project. So far, charities supported have included Islington Food Bank, Glengall Wharf Garden and ShareHorticulture (community projects supporting physical and mental health).

New staff networks

These networks are open to all members of staff, providing opportunities for networking, conversations, peer support and personal development. Balance is for men and women balancing careers and home lives. LGBT+allies was launched with a Stonewall event, a charity that champions acceptance without exception and to support BAME+allies, we have a rolling programme of articles increasing awareness of major cultural and religious events.

Using technology

The firm now runs innovation workshops, which enable staff to suggest and to share ideas about ways in which the firm could work even more effectively. We are developing an online tool which enables lawyers to indicate their work allocation preferences and the firm runs a successful "working from home" scheme, enabling all full-time solicitors to work from home one day every fortnight.

MacsMentor

This is the firm's internal mentoring scheme. Every solicitor is paired with a partner. It is a valuable opportunity to receive regular advice and support, to discuss development aims and to talk about careers. A new mentoring scheme for business services staff is now also running, to enable junior staff to access guidance from more experienced colleagues.

MY ROLE IS TO HELP FOSTER A POSITIVE, INCLUSIVE AND SUPPORTIVE WORKING ENVIRONMENT THROUGHOUT THE FIRM, TO BUILD ON WHAT MACFARLANES IS ALREADY DOING AND TO ALSO GROW THE PRO BONO, VOLUNTEERING AND CHARITIES PROGRAMME. THERE ARE SOME EXCITING INITIATIVES ALREADY UNDERWAY AND OTHERS IN THE PIPELINE.

OUR FIRST LAW IS RESPECT.
EARN IT

PEOPLE

Exceptional lawyers know that clients and colleagues are people first and foremost, not just business opportunities. As a firm of exceptional lawyers we foster a culture of mutual respect. To thrive here, it's something you will want to earn.

LIFE AT MACFARLANES

For me, Macfarlanes stood out from the other top City firms in terms of its size, the combination of practice areas and its reputation for excellence.

Having studied the LPC with other Macfarlanes' trainees in my intake, and having come into the firm for regular talks and socials throughout the LPC year, I felt very comfortable with the people and the place here at Macfarlanes. It has definitely helped me to settle in quickly.

So far, being a trainee here has been well-balanced between exciting and challenging. Being one of just 30 trainees means that we are given real responsibility from day one and not shielded from client contact. In fact, on my first day in the private client property group – also my first seat - I was involved in a completion. This could have been overwhelming but thanks to the support from my supervisor, and other solicitors closely guiding me, I always felt there was someone to turn to.

A firm that combines corporate and private client also appealed to me. The opportunity to be involved in advising individuals on their business and private needs, as well as blue chip corporate bodies, is an offering that is unmatched elsewhere. Sitting in the private client team for my first six months has been fascinating; I don't feel I would have had the same array of experience elsewhere.

It's daunting to join a place that sets such high expectations across everything it does but the firm's culture is defined by approachability and respect. Every single person I have come across has been welcoming and helpful. It really does show that the idea of teamwork being at the heart of what Macfarlanes does is not just something you hear at a recruitment fair but the reality of life at the firm.

I met a team from Macfarlanes at a recruitment fair and was impressed by their passion for the firm, and their engaging and friendly manner. I also liked the firm's wider perspective on recruitment. Obviously academic success is important, but other skills such as communication and team work are also highly valued. This, combined with the quality of clients and interesting work, really cemented my decision to join the firm.

The work is often complex and high value, however the firm's size means that trainees get more exposure to clients earlier than at many City firms. During my second seat in commercial property, I often worked on matters on my own which I had not expected. I spoke directly with clients and drafted documents – always under the watchful eye of my supervisor. I found that terrifying at the beginning but now realise it was genuinely the best way to learn.

A highlight for me so far was during my first seat in funds when I worked on a large closing of a fund for one of the firm's biggest clients. We had to prepare all of the documents and make sure that the investors and clients were ready to go. It was a big job with plenty of late nights but was very exciting to be part of such a huge deal where I was given a lot of responsibility.

Outside of work, I have also enjoyed the range of CSR activities to get involved with. Each year the firm chooses a charity of the year to support and there are regular fundraising events from social events and quizzes to sporting challenges and raffles. They are a good opportunity to get to know people from across the firm.

I had a wonderful experience training here and have made some very good friends.

Before starting my two-week vacation scheme at Macfarlanes, I had not imagined having a casual chat with the senior partner having come face to face with him in a lift. Charles Martin struck up a conversation because he didn't recognise me.

Find out more by visiting our website macfarlanes.com

This is one of the great things about a smaller graduate intake and a smaller sized firm overall, in that everyone knows or at least recognises a large proportion of their fellow employees. Charles' approach towards me was representative of the firm as a whole, with even the most senior of partners open and happy to talk. This attitude and personal approach was something that I really liked and one of the many reasons that I applied to Macfarlanes.

Another big advantage which comes with the size of the firm is working in close-knit, agile teams. This results in high levels of responsibility and direct exposure to clients early on in your training contract. Diligent supervision paired with the fantastic training that Macfarlanes provides, means that you can start to add value to your team from day one. For example, during the first or second week of my first seat, which was in investment management, I was asked to call the lawyers acting for the other side on a deal and encouraged to negotiate a small point. It was nerve-wracking at the time, but a great learning experience.

I am currently working in the corporate and M&A department which is the best place to learn about the firm as a whole, as you deal with different teams contributing their expertise to a deal. It is quite an intense environment, but the people are supportive and happy to help.

Six months feels like the right amount of time to get really settled and to develop a good feel for each department before you move onto your next rotation. I am looking forward to seeing where my next seat will take me.

Our firm is recognised for its high quality legal advice – our trainees need to meet the highest standards expected from our clients. That doesn't happen by accident. From our specially tailored LPC to our comprehensive education programme during the training contract and beyond, we take training incredibly seriously.

We give trainees as much responsibility as they can handle – the best way to learn is through doing the work of a solicitor.

In return for the commitment, hard work and ambition of our trainees, we help to create exceptional lawyers delivering excellent service, which is what attracts clients to us.

THE VALUABLE TIME WE DEVOTE TO FINDING AND NURTURING OUR TRAINEES STEMS FROM A SIMPLE FACT: THEY ARE THE NEXT GENERATION OF MACFARLANES' PARTNERS.

Jat Bains
Partner, Finance

Our partners are involved every step of the way. As a firm we visit universities around the country, invite potential applicants to events at our offices and personally interview the candidates who attend our assessment days. Partners make the ultimate decision as to who our trainees are. Each trainee has a partner acting as their mentor. I'm one of the partners on our Trainee Solicitor Committee and a group of us help to oversee the entire process, which includes a system of "constituency groups" through which we disseminate information and seek trainee feedback.

The valuable time we devote to finding and nurturing our trainees stems from a simple fact: they are the next generation of Macfarlanes' partners.

WE

INDEPENDENCE

Considered, independent thought is the essence of our firm. It's part of what makes us different in our clients' eyes and it's how we deliver results.

We'll expect you to think for yourself from day one.

THE PROGRAMME

LEGAL PRACTICE COURSE (LPC)

All our trainees study the Macfarlanes tailored LPC at the London Holborn branch of BPP Law School. You will study with those going to other firms during the compulsory elements of the LPC from September to February. From March you will study a separate set of electives, specially designed for our trainees to take together as a group to prepare you for your work in our distinctive range of practice areas.

While undertaking the LPC as a future trainee you will attend a series of seminars in our offices in order to link your study with the practice of law at Macfarlanes. These seminars at the firm, along with various social events, also help to give you a fuller introduction to the firm, your fellow trainees and your future colleagues.

Future trainees are required to achieve a Commendation or above in their GDL and LPC.

Fees for the LPC at BPP are paid in full for all our future trainees and you will receive a £7,000 maintenance grant.

TRAINING CONTRACT

Your training contract at Macfarlanes will combine hands-on experience with a first class education programme. You will find the support you would expect from a leading firm: your future depends on the success of your training, as does the continued success of the firm.

Seat rotation

You will spend six months in four different practice areas: typically, one seat in corporate and M&A, two seats in either commercial real estate, private client, litigation or tax and then a seat in one of our specialised corporate practice areas. In each seat, you share a room with a partner or senior solicitor who supervises and supports you.

Development

You will follow an intensive schedule of seminars and lectures, presented by Macfarlanes' partners or senior solicitors. The programme is 'front-loaded' to develop your knowledge and skills at an early stage in each seat. As a trainee you may also be asked to contribute to a seminar or to update the team on recent developments in a particular area of law.

Mentoring and review

Each of your seats will feature a mid-seat and end-of-seat review, during which you can discuss your progress and which areas need focus. You are provided with a trainee mentor while you are studying the LPC. In addition, throughout your contract, you are given a partner who will act as your mentor and attend your six-monthly reviews with you. These mechanisms ensure that you get the most out of these first years. At the outset you will quickly become part of the team – people at all levels in the firm will know your name and value your contribution.

Trainee Solicitor Committee Constituency groups

As part of the trainee population, you will be divided into small 'constituency' groups of mixed intakes, meeting informally during your training contract. The purpose of the meetings is to give you direct regular access to our Trainee Solicitor Committee partners to discuss any issues of interest to you and to facilitate intra-trainee networking. Your allocated Trainee Solicitor Committee partner will also attend your six-monthly reviews to ensure continuity across your training contract.

VACATION SCHEME

The vacation scheme at Macfarlanes gives you a two-week snapshot of life as a trainee.

What to expect

You will be given hands-on experience, enabling you to develop a real understanding of the firm's culture and work. You might draft a letter and then work through the draft with a solicitor or trainee; or research a live issue for a client. You may be taken to client meetings or to meet counsel.

You will spend each of your two weeks with us in a different practice area, working alongside a partner, solicitor or trainee. At the same time, you will undertake a mock transaction that will run for the duration of your placement.

The vacation scheme has a strong social component. As well as the organised events, bowling with our trainees for example, or lunch with our partners, there are many opportunities to get to know people throughout the firm and to find out if Macfarlanes is right for you.

EVERYONE WAS VERY FRIENDLY AND APPROACHABLE SO I REALLY FELT THAT I COULD ASK QUESTIONS.

THE EFFORT THE FIRM PUTS INTO THE DAY IS OUTSTANDING...THE DAY HAS CONFIRMED MY DESIRE TO WANT TO WORK AT MACFARLANES.

2017 First Year Insight Day

INSIGHT DAY

We offer an insight day for first year undergraduates or second year undergraduates completing a four-year degree, to show you what life and work is really like at a leading law firm. The day includes:

- ◆ A negotiation exercise
- ◆ Speed networking
- ◆ Lunch with trainees, solicitors and partners
- ◆ An application skills workshop
- ◆ Work-shadowing a trainee

Whilst the day enables us to meet you this is a two-way process. You will have an opportunity to meet people across the firm. Work-shadowing one of our trainees offers invaluable experience. You will get to see the real work that goes on behind closed doors. We will also help you with application forms, offering advice and tips on what you should and shouldn't write. In addition we ask that you come armed with questions.

This day will provide you with skills and information to decide whether a career in law is right for you.

Applications for the insight day, vacation scheme and training contract are made online. The sooner you apply, the sooner we can process your application.

Insight day assessment

In addition to outstanding academics, the qualities we look for in applicants to our insight day are the same as those we look for in our people. These include strong communication skills, attention to detail, research skills, drive, motivation, resilience and an interest in City law. Applicants will be invited for a telephone interview before offers for a place on our insight day are made.

Vacation scheme assessment

Vacation scheme applicants may be invited to one of our assessment days, where you will complete a group exercise and a partner interview before offers of vacation scheme places are made.

Training contract assessment

The training contract assessment process requires candidates to attend our assessment day, taking part in partner interviews, a written exercise, case studies and a group exercise and presentation. We do not make it a condition of a training contract offer that candidates have attended a vacation scheme at the firm. If candidates are unsuccessful or unable to attend a vacation scheme that does not disbar you from applying for a training contract.

The assessment process for all our programmes is intentionally demanding – we set high standards in everything – but it is also enjoyable and stimulating. We keep our recruitment procedures under constant review to ensure that they are meritocratic but also that there are no elements that stand in the way of the recruitment of candidates from a wide range of universities and backgrounds.

We want to recruit the best candidates regardless of their background or where they were educated. The majority of our assessment processes for both our vacation schemes and training contracts are scored CV blind. We also use a contextual recruitment tool to understand each applicant's achievements in the context in which they have been gained. We understand that not every candidate's achievements look the same on paper – and we want to recruit the best people, from every background. This helps to promote meritocracy and diversity in our candidate selection process.
